The Leading Story of the August Wide Awake.

A delightful reminiscence of Lafayette's last visit to America, is contributed by Sarah O. Jewett; it is entitled "Peg's Little Chair," and has a full-page illustration by Garrett. "The Bride's Bouquet" is a charming story of a good deed, and "The Silent Lie" is an admirable school story. "Pokeberry Juice and Mullein," by Kate Upson Clark, is a little tale that reveals some of the funny toilet secrets of country girls a generation ago. "Mr. Brown's Play-fellow," by J. Loxley Rhee, "Shells of Sea and Land," by Will M. Clemens, "The Poppy Bee," by Mrs. Hall, and "How to Dry Starfishes," by Louisa Lyndon, are good short articles for the lovers of natural history. "How the Cossacks Play Polo" is a terrible and dramatic story of a Russian field-sport indulged in by officers of the Imperial Guard; it is by Madame de Meissner of the Russian legation. "What Seven Indian Boys Did" is a true account of some knowledge-loving Alaska boys, by Francis C. Sparhawk. Margaret Sidney's "Peppers" serial in this number has all the interest of a good novel. "Miss Matilda Archambeau Van Dorn," the serial by Miss Cumings, is full of amusing developments. "Marietta's Good Times" are really good times. "Men and Things" pages abound with original anecdotes. The poems are by Kate Putnam Osgood, Maria Johns Hammond, Eli Shepperd, Jane Ellis Joy and Richard Burton. Especially good things for veranda reading are the Margaret-Patty Letter, by Mrs. William Clafin, and the fine ballad by Mrs. Harriet Prescott Spofford, "Pope's Mother at Twickenham."

Wide Awake is $2.40 a year; 20 cents a number. A specimen (back number) will be sent on receipt of 5 cents. D. Lothrop Company, publishers, Boston.

Smart Man and Small Boy.

The newsboy was calling his wares as loud as his voice would let him: "All about the great North Side mystery!"

The smart man came along—one of those smart men who grow fat catching other people in mistakes. He lifted his eyebrows and got ready to crush the boy and laugh with the amused bystanders.

"Why," said he, glancing about him, "if the paper contains all about the mystery it is no mystery any more. The paper tells; don't you see?" And he wondered why the boy didn't blush and retire in confusion.

"All about the great North Side mystery!" repeated the boy just as loud as ever, and without taking his eyes from the face of the smart man. Then he continued in a calmer tone: "The more you read what's in de newspaper de more mystery they is. See?"—Chicago Herald.

A Defrauded Worker.

Hungry Higgins—Tell you what it is, I've been gettin' the worst of it.

Weary Watkins—Yes; you look like it, sure.

Hungry Higgins—Never mind gettin' personal, now. It ain't genteel. But I was thinkin' of feller bein' paid in these big cities for exercisin' dogs; and agin' I was thinkin' of the amount o' dogs through the country I have give exercise to without even gettin' as much as a cold hand-out fer my trouble. Wy, it actually makes me tired.—Indianapolis Journal.

A Tiny Sermon.

My dear girl, make up your mind that in the summer time you are not going to say one word that you cannot repeat to your mother; that you are not going to do one thing that, when you are talking to your sweetheart, you cannot tell him about. You are going to have golden days; then, won't you remember you must not only be pure in thought and deed, but you want to keep your name and fame clean and sweet?—Ladies' Home Journal.
